

Dr. Kim Noble

Kim has been a perianesthesia nurse for about 25 years as she discovered it is the perfect practice area! She takes call and works during semester breaks.

Kim is teaching her last semester as an Assistant Professor at Temple University in the undergraduate nursing program. She is a diploma graduate and obtained her BSN from Penn State University. After obtaining her MSN from Widener University, Kim completed her education with a Ph.D. from Temple University School of Medicine in the Department of Physiology.

Kim is active in the American Society of PeriAnesthesia Nursing as the EBP committee chair, a columnist for JOPAN and has spoken nationally and internationally on a variety of PeriAnesthesia subjects.

MAPAN hosted Kim in 2009 as she presented A Systems Review of Pathophysiology.

We are delighted to have Kim again share her knowledge with us.
